Saving your document

CWRC-Writer allows you to save documents you have created on our server as temporary test files to work with. At the moment, however, we do not have individual authentication setup for each user, so it's best if you do not play with each other's files: this way each tester can have his/her own files to alter, add to, and so forth.

1. Click on the "Save" toolbar button.

2. Enter the title of the document, and click "Save."

Adding your initials to the beginning (e.g. MS) is a good way to indicate to others that it is a file created by another CWRC-Writer tester. You may only enter upper or lowercase letter; no numbers, spaces, or punctuation are allowed.

3. Once you clicked on "Save," the document validates and is successfully saved.

If the document is not valid, a pop-up will appear and you will be asked if you would like to save anyway.

"Old Chants"
By Walt Whitman

An ancient song, reciting, ending,
Once gazing toward thee, Mother of All,
Musing, seeking themes fitted for thee,

Accept me, thou saidst, the elder ballads,
And name for me before thou goest each ancient poet.

(Of many debts incalculable,
Haply our New World's chiefest debt is to old poems.)

Ever so far back precluding thee, America,
Old Chants, Egyptian priests, and those of Ethiopia,
The Hindu Epics, the Grecian, Chinese, Persian
The Biblical books and prophets, and deep idyls of the Nazarene
The Iliad, Odyssey, plots, doings, wanderings of Eneas,
Hesiod, Eschylus, Sophocles, Merlin, Author,
The Cid, Roland at Roncevaux,
The troubadours, minstrels,
Chaucer, Dante, flocks of OkechantaPoemMS was saved successfully.
The Border Minstrelsy, if Shakespeare, Schiller, Walter Scott,
As some vast wondrous
The great shadowy group
Darting their mighty mass
Thou'lt with as now thy blood
Thou'lt pausing a moment
Well pleased, accepting of my gift,
Thou enterest at thy entrance

RESEARCHNOTE: This poem has a suggestion of the magical imagery of Kenneth Leslie's By Stubborn Stars.
